

Confidentiality Agreement

Purpose.

- a. Create a safe space for broadcast professionals to discuss, share and learn about security, compliance and risk strategies
- b. Allow engineering, IT and security teams to safely address common challenges in security
- c. Network and connect with peers in the industry

Chatham House Rule in Force

The Cybersecurity for Broadcasters Retreat will be held, in its entirety, under the Chatham House Rule. This rule stipulates that participants are free to use or share with company associates the information received, but may not, under any circumstances, reveal the identity or the affiliation of the speaker(s) or participant(s) who shared that information.

Confidential Information includes any information shared in the conference by speakers and participants including technical data or know-how, information relating to security, incidents, compliance, research, products, software, pricing, internal procedures or strategies, finances, and employees, and in any form whatsoever (including, but not limited to, in writing, in machine readable or other tangible form, orally, or visually).

Enforcement of Chatham House Rule

Participants found to have violated this confidentiality agreement will be excluded from all future activities of the Cybersecurity for Broadcasters Retreat, including conferences, resource directories, forums and other benefits.

Strict Ban on Publishing and Social Sharing

NewsCheckMedia LLC will be forced to take legal action against any participant who publishes information disclosed during the Cybersecurity for Broadcasters Retreat. Publishing includes blogging, social sharing, reproducing in corporate newsletters or disclosing during interviews with the press.

Participants understand that written communications about cybersecurity can provide roadmaps to hackers and purveyors of cyber infection. Attendees understand that sensitive information of previous security incidents and vulnerabilities pertaining to companies will be analyzed and discussed as case studies for learning purposes only.
